27) Sanders Sporting Goods, an international sporting goods chain, is being sued for sexual harassment by a Jill, who is a former Sanders employee. The plaintiff asserts that she was the victim of numerous unwanted sexual advances from a male co-worker, John. Jill claims that Sanders' management condoned a hostile work environment and that the company is liable for the actions of John.

All of the following are most likely relevant questions to address in this court case EXCEPT

- A) Does Sanders have a record of employees who claim disparate treatment in the workplace?
 - B) Did Sanders take reasonable care to prevent sexual harassment in the workplace?
 - C) Does Sanders have a policy statement regarding sexual harassment?
 - D) Did Jill take advantage of any corrective opportunities provided by the employer?

Answer: A

Explanation: A) Disparate treatment relates to intentional discrimination, which is not directly important in this case. Firms decrease their liability in sexual harassment cases if they show that they have taken reasonable care to prevent sexual harassment through various actions, such as issuing a policy statement. Whether the co-worker is a U.S. citizen and Sanders is a U.S. entity are important in determining whether EEO laws are applicable.

Consolidated Coin Caterers Corp.*, the U.S. Supreme Court held that an employee who is over 40 years of age might sue for discrimination if a "significantly younger" employee replaces him or her, even if the replacement is also over 40. 37) What is the significance of Title VII? What has been the effect of Title VII on the modern workforce and diversity management?

Answer: Title VII bars discrimination on the part of most employers, including all public or private employers of 15 or more persons. It also covers all private and public educational institutions, the federal government, and state and local governments. It bars public and private employment agencies from failing or refusing to refer for employment any individual because of race, color, religion, sex, or national origin. Title VII also established the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission (EEOC) to administer and enforce the Civil Rights law at work. The changes brought about by Title VII as well as demographic changes and globalization have altered the modern workforce. White males no longer dominate the labor force, and women and minorities represent the lion's share of labor force growth over the near future. Furthermore, globalization requires employers to hire minority members with the appropriate cultural and language competencies to deal with customers abroad. Managing diversity means maximizing diversity's potential benefits (greater cultural awareness, and broader language competencies, for instance) while minimizing the potential barriers (such as prejudices and bias) that can undermine the company's performance. Legally, compulsory actions can reduce some blatant diversity barriers; taking a diverse workforce and blending it into a close-knit and productive one requires more.

38) What were the three crucial guidelines affecting equal employment legislation that Chief Justice Burger identified in his written opinion on Griggs v. Duke Power Company?

Answer: First, discrimination by the employer need not be overt. The employer does not have to be shown to have intentionally discriminated against the employee or applicant. It need only show that discrimination did take place. Second, an employment practice must be job related if it has an unequal impact on members of a protected class. Third, the burden of proof is on the employer to show that the hiring practice is job related.

- A) employee
- B) employer
- C) judge
- D) EEOC

Answer: B

Explanation: B) According to the Civil Rights Act of 1991, once an aggrieved applicant or employee demonstrates that an employment practice (such as "must lift 100 pounds") has a disparate (or "adverse") impact on a particular group, then the burden of proof shifts to the employer, who must show that the challenged practice is job related.

41) Race, color, religion, sex, or national origin is a motivating factor in a particular termination case, but the employee would have been terminated for failure to perform anyway. Which of the following most likely exists in this situation?

- A) mixed motive
- B) disparate impact
- C) liability defense
- D) burden of proof

Answer: A

Explanation: A) An unlawful employment practice is established when the complaining party demonstrates that race, color, religion, sex, or national origin was a motivating factor for any employment practice, even though other factors also motivated the practice. Some employers in so-called "mixed motive" cases had taken the position that even though their actions were discriminatory, other factors like the employee's dubious behavior made the job action acceptable. Under CRA 1991, an employer cannot avoid liability by proving it would have taken the same action—such as terminating someone—even without the discriminatory motive.

- A) Civil Rights Act of 1991
- B) Americans with Disabilities Act of 1990
- C) Equal Pay Act
- D) Disability Discrimination in Employment Act of 1967

Answer: B

Explanation: B) The Americans with Disabilities Act (ADA) of 1990 prohibits employment discrimination against qualified disabled individuals. It also says employers must make "reasonable accommodations" for physical or mental limitations unless doing so imposes an "undue hardship" on the business.

- A) cosmetic disfigurement
- B) anatomical loss

- A) drug-related
- B) mental
- C) vision

- A) protected class
- B) career anchors
- C) staff authorities
- D) qualified individuals

- A) making a reasonable accommodation
- B) fulfilling job analysis requirements
- C) identifying essential job functions
- D) complying with Title VII rules

Answer: A

Explanation: A) If an employee can't perform the job as currently structured, the employer must make a "reasonable accommodation" unless doing so would present an "undue hardship."

Reasonable accommodation might include modifying work schedules, or acquiring equipment or other devices (such as screen-reading programs) to assist the person.

- A) Employers make the necessary reasonable accommodations for employees.
- B) Employees fail to prove that their disabilities affect daily living activities.
- C) Conservative judges are sympathetic towards most small-business owners.
- D) Employee attorneys fail to draw connections between Title VII and ADA.

Answer: B

Explanation: B) Employers traditionally prevailed in almost all—96%—federal circuit court ADA decisions. The U.S. Supreme Court has ruled that a disability must be central to the employee's daily living (not just job).

- A) Employees will find it easier to prove that their disabilities are limiting.
- B) The number of major life activities considered disabilities will be narrowed.
- C) Employers will be required to make fewer accommodations for workers with disabilities.
- D) Employers will be required to hire a specific percentage of disabled workers to be in compliance.

Answer: A

- A) if the conduct substantially interferes with a person's work performance
- B) if the conduct creates an intimidating work environment
- C) if the conduct is completely consensual
- D) if the conduct creates an offensive work environment

Answer: C

Explanation: C) Under Title VII, sexual harassment generally refers to harassment on the basis of sex when such conduct has the purpose or effect of substantially interfering with a person's work performance or creating an intimidating, hostile, or offensive work environment.

Consensual sexual interactions may not violate Title VII.

- A) Civil Rights Act of 1991
- B) Federal Violence Against Women Act of 1994
- C) Pregnancy Discrimination Act
- D) Vocational Rehabilitation Act of 1973

Answer: B

Explanation: B) The Federal Violence Against Women Act of 1994 provides that a person who commits a crime of violence motivated by gender and thus deprives another of rights shall be liable to the party injured. The law offers an additional path women can use to seek relief for violent sexual harassment.

- B) verbal conduct of a sexual nature that unreasonably interferes with work performance
- C) physical conduct of a sexual nature that creates an offensive work environment
- D) mutually consensual physical conduct of a sexual nature between co-workers

Answer: D

Explanation: D) EEOC guidelines define sexual harassment as unwelcome sexual advances, requests for sexual favors, and other verbal or physical conduct of a sexual nature that creates an intimidating, hostile, or offensive work environment or interferes with work performance.

Requests for sexual favors that are used as the basis for employment decisions are also considered sexual harassment. Consensual sex between co-workers is not considered sexual harassment.

- A) the verbal remarks of a co-worker were sexually flirtatious
- B) the rejection of a supervisor's sexual advances led to a demotion
- C) a hostile work environment was created by a co-worker's sexual conversation
- D) a hostile work environment was created by a nonemployee's sexual advances

Answer: A

Explanation: A) The U.S. Supreme Court held that sexual harassment law doesn't cover ordinary "intersexual flirtation." Someone can prove sexual harassment if rejecting a supervisor's sexual advances led to a demotion, firing, or altered work assignment. Sexual harassment can also be proven if a hostile work environment is created by the sexual conduct of supervisors, co-workers, or nonemployees.

53) Judy was up for a promotion at Simpson Consulting when her supervisor, Will, encouraged her to develop a sexual relationship with him. He suggested that her promotion would be a sure thing if they were involved. When Judy declined his advances, Will fired her. Which of the following would Judy most likely be able to prove in court if she decided to sue Simpson Consulting?

- A) hostile environment created by supervisors
- B) hostile environment created by co-workers
- C) disparate treatment
- D) quid pro quo

Answer: D

Explanation: D) Quid pro quo (something for something) is the most direct way to prove that rejecting a supervisor's advances adversely affected what the EEOC calls a "tangible employment action" such as hiring, firing, promotion, demotion, and/or work assignment. Quid pro quo would be the best option for Judy if she sues the firm for Will's actions.

- A) quid pro quo
- B) hostile environment created by supervisors
- C) hostile environment created by co-workers
- D) hostile environment created by nonemployees

Answer: B

Explanation: B) As Shelley's supervisor, Gus created a hostile environment according to the EEOC. A claimant does not need to show that the harassment had tangible consequences such as demotion. It is sufficient in many cases to prove that a supervisor's sexual harassment substantially affected an employee's emotional and psychological abilities.

- A) having an informal policy for dealing with sexual harassment
- B) taking all complaints about harassment seriously
- C) establishing a management response system that includes an immediate reaction and investigation
- D) training supervisors and managers to increase their awareness of the issues

Answer: A

Explanation: A) Establishing a clear sexual harassment policy that clarifies how to report complaints and investigating charges quickly are major ways that employers can show that they took reasonable care to prevent and correct sexual harassment, which will minimize liability. An informal policy does not do so.

The plaintiff asserts that she was the victim of numerous unwanted sexual advances from a co-worker. The employee claims that Sanders' management condoned a hostile work environment and that the company is liable for the actions of the employee.

Which of the following, if true, would best support the plaintiff's argument that Sanders is liable for sexual harassment?

- A) Sanders re-published its sexual harassment policy twice within the last year.
- B) The HR department at Sanders has records of the plaintiff's initial complaints.
- C) Sanders lacks a management response system for handling sexual harassment complaints.
- D) Sanders recently lost a court case filed by former employees who claimed disparate treatment.

Answer: C

The plaintiff asserts that she was the victim of numerous unwanted sexual advances from a male co-worker. The woman claims that Connor Concrete's management condoned a hostile work environment and that the company is liable for the actions of the male employee.

Which of the following, if true, would most likely undermine the plaintiff's claim that Sanders is liable for the male employee's conduct?

- A) The male employee physically threatened the plaintiff on three occasions.
- B) The male employee made sexual advances towards the plaintiff on a daily basis.
- C) The male employee was required by HR to participate in a sexual harassment awareness course.
- D) The male employee's conduct significantly interfered with the plaintiff's ability to perform her job.

Answer: C

Explanation: C) If the male employee was required to take a sexual harassment course, then that action shows Sanders was making a reasonable attempt to stop the behavior. A hostile environment most likely existed if the male employee made threats and daily sexual advances that interfered with the plaintiff's job performance.

- A) filing a complaint with the local EEOC office
- B) filing a verbal complaint with the harasser's boss
- C) writing a letter to the accused
- D) consulting an attorney

Answer: B

Explanation: B) The first step Alexis should take is filing a verbal complaint with the harasser and the harasser's boss. After that, writing a letter to the accused and filing a report with the HR director are appropriate actions. Filing a complaint with the EEOC and consulting an attorney are the final steps to take if previous efforts have not improved the situation.

- A) file a verbal contemporaneous complaint with the harasser's manager
 - B) file written reports regarding the unwelcome conduct with the human resource director
 - C) file a verbal contemporaneous complaint with the harasser
 - D) file a claim with the EEOC

Answer: D

Explanation: D) Courts generally look to whether the harassed employee used the employer's reporting procedures to file a complaint promptly. After the process with the employer is exhausted and remedy is still needed then the workers should file with the EEOC.

Answer: TRUE

Explanation: The ADA does not list specific disabilities. Answer: FALSE

Explanation: In Burlington Industries v. Ellerth, the employee accused her supervisor of quid pro quo harassment. She said her boss propositioned and threatened her with demotion if she did not respond. He did not carry out the threats, and she was promoted. Therefore, in quid pro quo cases it is not necessary for the employee to suffer a tangible job action (such as a demotion) to win the case.

68) Describe how the ADA Amendments Act of 2008 affects both employers and employees.
Answer: The era in which employers prevail in most ADA claims probably ended January 1, 2009. On that day, the ADA Amendments Act of 2008 (ADAAA) became effective. The EEOC had been interpreting the ADA's "substantially limits" phrase very narrowly. The 2008 ADAAA's basic effect is to make it much easier for employees to show that their disabilities are limiting. For example, the new act makes it easier for an employee to show that his or her disability is influencing one of the employee's "major life activities." It does this by adding examples like reading, concentrating, thinking, sleeping, and communicating to the list of ADA major life activities. As another example, under the new act, an employee will be considered disabled even if he or she has been able to control his or her impairments through medical or "learned behavioral" modifications. The bottom line is that employers will henceforth have to redouble their efforts to make sure they're complying with the ADA and providing reasonable accommodations to employees.

Learning Outcome: 2.2: Describe post-1990 employment laws including the Americans with Disabilities Act and how to avoid accusations of sexual harassment at work.

69) What are the three primary ways that an individual can prove sexual harassment? Name and describe each one.

Answer: The three main ways an employee can prove sexual harassment are quid pro quo, hostile environment created by supervisors, or hostile environment created by co-workers or nonemployees. Quid pro quo means that submission to sexual conduct is made a term or condition of employment or advancement. For example, a manager could say that a subordinate will only get a promotion if the subordinate does a sexual act with the manager. Even when no direct threats or promises are made in exchange for sexual advances, if an offensive work environment is created, sexual harassment has occurred. Such an offensive work environment is called a hostile environment. This hostile environment can be created by co-workers and their behaviors and actions. It can also be created by the behaviors and actions of a supervisor. A hostile environment is seen to exist when the discriminatory conduct is frequent and repeated over time or severe in nature and it unreasonably interferes with an employee's work performance. EEOC guidelines state that an employer is liable for the sexually harassing acts of its nonsupervisory employees if the employer knew or should have known of the harassing conduct.

70) What are the two primary arguments available to employers when defending against sexual harassment liability? What two defenses are available to employers fighting discriminatory practice allegations?

Answer: An employer must show that it exercised reasonable care to prevent and correct promptly any sexually harassing behavior. Reasonable care can be shown through strong sexual harassment policies, training managers and employees regarding their responsibilities for complying with these policies, instituting reporting processes, investigating charges promptly, and taking corrective action promptly. Second, the employer can demonstrate that the plaintiff "unreasonably failed to take advantage of any preventive or corrective opportunities provided by the employer." The employee's failing to use formal organizational reporting systems satisfies the second component. When defending against discriminatory practice allegations, an employer can claim that the employment practice is a bona fide occupational qualification for performing the job. The other option is showing that the practice is a business necessity, which requires showing that there is an overriding business purpose for the discriminatory practice and that the practice is therefore acceptable.

- A) comparing disparate rejection rates
- B) holding a fact-finding conference
- C) utilizing population comparisons
- D) using the standard deviation rule

Answer: B

Explanation: B) The EEOC investigates charges of discrimination and frequently holds fact-finding conferences, so this would not be an option for employees or job applicants. Comparing disparate rejection rates, making population comparisons, and using the standard deviation rule are methods available to employees and applicants trying to show that an employer's procedures have an adverse effect on a protected group.

- A) disparate rejection rates
- B) restricted policy approach
- C) population comparisons
- D) McDonnell-Douglas test

Answer: D

Explanation: D) Lawyers in disparate impact cases use disparate rejection rates, restricted policy approaches, and population comparisons to test whether an employer's policies or actions have the effect of unintentionally screening out disproportionate numbers of women or minorities. - A) 40

- D) 100

Answer: C

Explanation: C) Federal agencies use a "4/5ths rule" to assess disparate rejection rates: "A selection rate for any racial, ethnic, or sex group which is less than four-fifths or 80% of the rate for the group with the highest rate will generally be regarded as evidence of adverse impact, while a greater than four-fifths rate will generally not be regarded as evidence of adverse impact."

- A) Title VII of the 1964 Civil Rights Act
- B) Vocational Rehabilitation Act of 1973

- D) 1972 Equal Opportunity Act

Answer: A

Explanation: A) An employer can claim that the employment practice is a bona fide occupational qualification (BFOQ) for performing the job according to Title VII. Title VII provides that "it should not be an unlawful employment practice for an employer to hire an employee . . . on the basis of religion, sex, or national origin in those certain instances where religion, sex, or national origin is a bona fide occupational qualification reasonably necessary to the normal operation of that particular business or enterprise."

- A) fire fighter in a metropolitan fire department
- B) prison guard at a federal penitentiary
- C) teacher at a private, all-girls school
- D) actor in a toothpaste commercial

Answer: D

Explanation: D) Gender may be a BFOQ for positions like actor, model, and restroom attendant requiring physical characteristics possessed by one sex. However, for most jobs today, it's difficult to claim that gender is a BFOQ.

- A) BARS
- B) ADEA
- C) EEOC
- D) BFOQ

Answer: D

Explanation: D) An employer can claim that the employment practice is a bona fide occupational qualification (BFOQ) for performing the job. In this case, a specific gender is necessary for the job.

83) Which defense requires showing that there is an overriding company-related purpose for a discriminatory practice and that the practice is therefore acceptable?

- A) prima facie
- B) business necessity
- C) adverse impact
- D) mixed motive

Answer: B

Explanation: B) "Business necessity" is a defense created by the courts that requires showing that there is an overriding business purpose for the discriminatory practice and that the practice is therefore acceptable. It's not easy to prove business necessity because the Supreme Court made it clear that business necessity does not encompass such matters as avoiding an employer inconvenience, annoyance, or expense.

84) The application requirements for Western Airlines pilot positions require candidates to have logged at least 200 hours piloting an aircraft within the previous 36 months. In addition, applicants must have 2,500 hours of experience in the air with at least 1,000 hours as the commanding pilot of a commercial airplane. A four-year college degree is also required. Jeff Sanchez, who is Hispanic, applied for a position as a pilot and was rejected because he has a degree from a 2-year college and only 2,000 hours of flight experience. Jeff is suing Western Airlines for discriminatory hiring practices.

Which of the following, if true, best supports Western Airlines' defense?

- A) At Western Airlines, turnover is high among minority employees working as pilots and flight attendants.
- B) Recent experiences with college recruiting have led Western Airlines to increase the percentage of its minority pilots.
- C) The total number of hours spent flying a commercial airline is a valid predictor of performance for most Western Airlines pilots.
- D) Western Airlines bases its selection tests and hiring practices on industry guidelines for commercial pilots.

Answer: C

Explanation: C) Western Airlines' best defense involves proving that its selection tests or other employment practices are valid predictors of performance on the job. Where the employer can establish such validity, the courts have generally supported using the test or other employment practice as a business necessity. In this example, the number of flight hours is a predictor of job performance. Turnover, recruiting, and industry guidelines are less important factors.

In addition, applicants must have 2,500 hours of experience in the air with at least 1,000 hours as the commanding pilot of a commercial airplane. A four-year college degree is also required. Wallace Roberts, who is African-American, applied for a position as a pilot and was rejected because he has a degree from a 2-year college and only 2,000 hours of flight experience. Jeff is suing Western Airlines for discriminatory hiring practices.

Which of the following statements is most likely relevant to this court case against Western Airlines?

- A) Most pilots at Western Airlines belong to labor unions and are involved in collective bargaining arrangements detrimental to the industry.
- B) The job requirements for pilots at Western Airlines are a business necessity due to the human risks associated with hiring unqualified applicants.
- C) The Age Discrimination in Employment Act prevents firms, such as Western Airlines, from discriminating when age is a BFOQ.
- D) As a global firm, Western Airlines can easily establish a prima facie case of discrimination based on race.

Answer: B

Explanation: B) Commercial pilots put passengers at risk if they are unqualified, so it is a business necessity for Western Airlines to have what may be discriminatory hiring practices. In this example, the job requires a high degree of skill, and the economic and human risks of hiring an unqualified applicant are great.

- A) spreading information about job openings through word-of-mouth among a firm's predominantly Hispanic workforce
 - B) providing misleading information to Asian and Indian job applicants
 - C) posting help wanted ads that specify young, male applicants
 - D) posting job advertisements only in local newspapers

Answer: D

Explanation: D) Ads that specify age or gender may be problematic, but only posting ads in local newspapers is acceptable. Using word-of-mouth to relay information about job openings is only problematic if the workforce is mostly made up of members of a particular group. Providing misleading or false information to certain applicants is also potentially discriminatory.

- 87) Which of the following is most likely an example of a discriminatory selection standard?
- A) measuring a software designer applicant's knowledge about a computer language
 - B) requiring a high school teacher applicant to have a four-year college degree
 - C) requiring engineer applicants to meet specific height standards
 - D) asking prison guard applicants to reveal their arrest records

Answer: C

Explanation: C) It would most likely be unlawful to require engineers to meet certain height standards because height is not related to the job. If a job requires security clearance, such as a prison guard, then it is not discriminatory to ask about an applicant's arrest record. Educational requirements, physical characteristics, and knowledge are acceptable selection standards when they specifically relate to the job.

Answer: TRUE

Explanation: The restricted policy approach means demonstrating that the employer's policy intentionally or unintentionally excluded members of a protected group. Here the problem is usually obvious—such as policies against hiring bartenders less than six feet tall. Evidence of restricted policies such as these is enough to prove adverse impact and to expose an employer to litigation.

91) Shippers Express is accused of adverse impact on a protected group. Eighty percent of all male applicants are hired, but only 50% of female applicants are hired. Using the formula for disparate rejection rates, adverse impact cannot be shown.

Answer: FALSE

Explanation: A selection rate for any racial, ethnic, or sex group which is less than four-fifths or 80% of the rate for the group with the highest rate will generally be regarded as evidence of adverse impact, while a greater than four-fifths rate will generally not be regarded as evidence of adverse impact. In this example, Shippers Express hires 80% of male applicants, but only 50% of female applicants. Four-fifths of 80% would be 64%. Since 50% is less than 64%, adverse impact exists.

It exists where an employer treats an individual differently because that individual is a member of a particular race, religion, gender, or ethnic group. Disparate impact means that an employer engages in an employment practice or policy that has a greater impact on the members of a protected group under Title VII than on other employees, regardless of intent. 97) What are the methods an applicant or employee can use to show that an employer's procedures (such as a selection test) have an adverse impact on a protected group?

Answer: In practice, an applicant or employee can use one of these methods to show that one of an employer's procedures has an adverse impact on a protected group: 1) disparate rejection rate, which is a method that compares the rejection rates for a minority group and another group (usually the remaining nonminority applicants). Federal agencies use a 4/5ths rule to assess disparate rejection rates. 2) The standard deviation rule, which is a statistical measure of variability that helps to describe the difference between the numbers of minority candidates who were expected to be hired and who were actually hired and should be less than two standard deviations. 3) Restricted policy is a method that demonstrates that the employer's policy intentionally or unintentionally excluded members of a protected group. 4) Population comparisons method, which compares the percentage of minority/protected group and white workers in the organization with the percentage of the corresponding group in the labor market.

98) How can managers help firms avoid claims of discrimination? What laws are especially important for managers to understand in order to avoid triggering discrimination claims?

Answer: The human resource manager certainly plays a big role in helping the company avoid discriminatory practices like these, but at the end of the day, the first-line supervisor usually triggers the problem. Managers need to understand the questions that can and cannot be asked when interviewing applicants, and know what constitutes sexual harassment, and how equal employment opportunity law affects all human resources decisions, including those relating to appraisal, compensation, promotions, disciplinary procedures, and employee dismissals. First, managers should understand the Equal Pay Act of 1963, which states it is unlawful to discriminate in pay on the basis of sex when jobs involve equal work; require equivalent skills, effort, and responsibility; and are performed under similar working conditions. Managers should also understand the Age Discrimination in Employment Act of 1967 (ADEA), which made it unlawful to discriminate against employees or applicants who are between 40 and 65 years of age. Younger managers may have to especially guard against ageist prejudices and assuming that younger workers are better qualified than older workers.

99) What is the most common next step in the EEOC enforcement process after a person files an employment discrimination claim?

- A) The EEOC either accepts or refers the charge.
- B) The two parties are required to participate in mediation.
- C) A commission investigates the claim in an open meeting.
- D) The employer and EEOC bring a civil suit in a federal district court.

Answer: A

- A) voluntary mediation
- B) fact-finding conference
- C) collective bargaining
- D) mandatory arbitration

Answer: B

Explanation: B) Early in the investigation, the EEOC holds an initial fact-finding conference. The EEOC calls these "informal meetings" for defining issues and determining whether there's a basis for negotiation. However, the EEOC's real focus here is often on settlement. Its investigators use the conferences to find weak spots in each party's position, which are used to push for a settlement.

- A) a fact-finding conference
- B) voluntary mediation
- C) mandatory arbitration
- D) alternative dispute resolution

- A) changing the culture through diversity training education programs
- B) appointing a small group of minorities to high-profile positions
- C) recruiting minority members to the board of directors

- A) sexual harassment
- B) racial discrimination
- C) reverse discrimination
- D) affirmative action

Answer: C

Explanation: C) The case serves as an example of reverse discrimination. In Bakke v. Regents of the University of California (1978), the University of California at Davis Medical School denied admission to white student Allen Bakke, allegedly because of the school's affirmative action quota system, which required that a specific number of openings go to minority applicants.
